Democrats Ask For Full Party Support

symbolized by a donkey's head and an elephant's tail. We are united; yet we have our differences within our party. But we Democrats prefer to live in the House of our Fathers, the Democratic Party, rather than to merely exist in the stables of tht Republican Party, where for the past four years we have learned and experienced such dire political living conditions, with such bitter regret that even though there may exist a few leaks in the roof or a few broken windowpanes in the House of our Fathers, we have learned that it is better to repair them from within — we decline and refuse to burn down the church to get rid of the bats in the belfry. And it is within our party, in the House of Our Fathers, the Democartic Party, that our differences can and will be equitably resolved. And even though some may possibly have strayed a little in the past, in the emotional fervor occasioned by a great personality, a great General and a great individual (and I say this sincerely), an individual who in the campaign of 1952 single-handedly carried the Republican Party on his back, despite its past unenviable record, policies and personalities within the Republican Party. You no doubt will recall that in the 1952 campaign, General Eisenhower visited Richmond and was standing on the south portico of the Capitol of the Confederacy, that as the General rose to speak, as if predestined, the planks in the Republican constructed platform caved in beneath him—which was merely evidence that this great personality was bigger than his own party and the weak platform enunicited by the Republican Party in their convention in Chicago a few weeks before. Which platform, weak as it was, has nevertheless in the past four years been repudiated by that so-called great Republican Party (of inaction), and the great 'crusade' has ended where it started — namely, in the unfulfilled promises of the Republican Party. And I say, in all sincerity and not facetiously, that come November 6, the Great Democratic Party will aide the captive General in removing the great burden of Republicanism from his overburdened back, release him from his Republican captors, who themselves have failed to support him during the past four years, and permit him to enjoy a well-earned retirement and partake of the country air, and the scent of new-mown hay, at Gettysburg. And by so doing, place at the helm of this great country a man signally qualified for such high office — a man who will have the support of his own party, as well as the American people, the Democratic nominee, Adlai Stevenson. Despite Republican control of our Executive Department of Government during the past four years, the interests of Virginia and the South, land have to a large extent been protected only by Democratic control of our Legislative Branch. It was Southern Democratic Congressmen particularly those in key Committee chairmanships, which prevented the iniquitous, infamous Republican - sponsored Civil Rights Bill from becoming law and thereby further prostrating the suffering South on the altar of unconstitutional deprivation of State Rights.

"We Virginians owe to our Democratic Congressmen and Senators a debt of gratitude, who in the face of insurmountable opposition have nevertheless insofar as possible preserved our individual rights and protected the rights of the States; they have given a good account of their stewardship, and we can truthfully say, 'Well done, our good and faithful public servants!' And you of Appomattox and the Fourth District are singularly blessed in having Watt Abbitt as your Representative. He has represented you well, and apparently or obviously the Republicans agree, as he is our only Congressman without opposition. We also are indebted to Senator Byrd and Senator Robertson for their stalwart and unselfish public service, of which we are the beneficiaries, and last, but not least, we should all put our Democratic shoulders to the political wheel to insure the election of our Congressional Democratic Nominees . . . . .

"Vote the straight Democratic ticket from top to bottom, in order to insure a Democratic Administration backed by a Democratic Congress, and then and only then will the South be taken into the councils of our Federal Government, where the interests of Virginia and the Southland can more effectively be be protected.

"It was Thomas Jefferson, the father of our Democratic Party, who first enunciated the doctrine of States Rights, the basic doctrine of the Democratic Party — as contrasted with the doctrine of the Republican Party enunciated by Alexander Hamilton, that all power is vested and centralized in the Federal Government. In the Virginia Constitutional debates of 1786, before Virginia would adopt the Federal Constitution unless and until they were guaranteed that there would be attached to that Constitution and made part thereof, a Bill of Rights guaranteeing certain individual, as well as States Rights, George Mason made that guarantee, and it was George Mason who prepared the first ten Amendments to the Federal Constitution which we cherish as our Bill of Rights. And it was that Tenth Amendment which provided, 'The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people.'

"Now, regardless of what has transpired in recent years, the only hope for the preservation — or, more accurately, the regaining — of our State sovereignty, lies in the Democratic Party, whose basic principles as enunciated by Jefferson is the sovereignty of the respective states. Policies may change; but principles, never. In 1952 the Republican Party loudly proclaimed the doctrine of States' rights, and even went to the writings of Thomas Jefferson and quoted verbatim from them to the effect that "the Federal Government is a creature of the respective States, and the creature has only those powers granted to it by the creator; and hence, the only power possessed by the Federal Government is that power which has been specifically granted to it by the States.' But this Republican proclamation was only sounding brass and tinkling cymbals, for almost immediately after taking office the team of Nixon, Brownell, etc. and Company, not only began digging the foundation for the Republican - sponsored nefarious and atrocious Civil Rights Bill, but also began digging the political grave of the Southland, which would have become law a few months ago and would today be pressing heavily as a crown of thorns upon the brow of the helpless South if it had not been for Southern Congressmen, many of whom held key positions in the United States Congress. This is just another example of Republican promises as contrasted with Republican Performances. The Rtpublicans also tell us that they have balanced the budget. Yes, they have balanced the budget, but how? Merely by raising the legal debt ceiling on the National debt,by adding a few more billion dollars to same to absorb the deficiency. And you all recall that it was our own Senator Byrd who so gallantly, though unsuccessfully, opposed this Republican maneuver.

"The Republicans also tell us that they have taken care of the farmer. Yes, just like the cities and cities have taken care of some of our unfortunate citizens in the poorhouses! Republican policies have caught the farmer in an economic squeeze between low prices for the products he sells, and high prices for the products he buys. The so-called Republican prosperity is nothing more than the economic momentum created by the Democratic Party prior to 1932; but even that momentum is now bogging down, as evidenced by the break in the stock market — which, if it had not been for the Democratic-sponsored S. E. C., no doubt would have crashed to the depths of 1929. Many of you no doubt remember the Republican depression of 1929, and also the Dtmocratic leadership and policies which later took the country out of the depths of depression and despair and placed it on a sound and prosperous economic basis. Since 1952 the Republican Party has been squandering the prosperity previously created by the Democratic Party.

"Now, we might ask ourselves, just what has the Democratic Party given America, in place of Teapot Dome Ripublicanism? Some of us may be old enough the remember 1932(when the country was in the depths of depression and despair brought about by eight years of Republican misrule, and in place of Republican inaction, the Great Democratic Party, under the leadership of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, gave us action, hope and accomplishment. It was under the leadership of the Democratic Party that we in America became the recipients of Old Age Benefits, Federal Deposit Insurance, Reconstruction Finance, S. E. C., U. C. C., Rural Electrification, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and many other beneficial programs that even the Republicans will not and cannot successfully criticize, but only in generalities, charge us with being a party of destruction, although they themselves have been glad to accept Democratic leadership and continue these programs which the American people desire. Yes, the Democratic Party pleads guilty to destroying poverty and want, which made necessary these programs, through which the Democratic Party, under our Old Age Benefit program, has destroyed the insecurity of old age. Under our Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, it has distroyed the run on banks and bank failures. Under our Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it has destroyed business failures and bankruptcies. Under our Rural Electrification program, it has destroyed the darkness and drudgery of our American farms. Under our Securities and Exchange Commission program, it has destroyed stock market crashes and loss of our securities and investments. Under our Home Owners Loan Corporation, it has destroyed foreclosures on the homes and farms of our American people. Under our Unemployment Compensation program, it has destroyed the soup kitchens and bread lines throughout America, and preserved the dignity of the American working man. It is the Democratic destruction, let the Republicans make the most of it.

"And thus, it is true that under the leadership of the Great Democratic Party, America today is reaping the benefit of such programs, and the wisdom of such programs and the leadership of the Democratic Party has given us a State Government which is held in highest esteem by our sister states, to such an extent that many of their officials frequently visit Virginia in order to study its governmmental structure and operations. American industries are migrating to Virginia in search of economic security and peace under the high type of Democratic Government in Virginia; it was also Democratic leadership in Virginia that has given us one of the lowest tax rates throughout the United States, not only a balanced budget, but a surplus; one of the few states without a sales tax, with an unsurpassed State highway system, which is considered one of the best systems throughout the United States, and without one cent of highway debt; and last, but not least, a State Government without bonded debt.

"And we might ask ourselves how such accomplishments have been made; and you will answer, 'Because of Dtmocratic principles and leadership which has been, is and will continue to be, responsive to the will of the people.' Since the days of Thomas Jefferson, with the exception of a few years following the Civil War, when Yankee bayonets and tyrannical Republican carpetbaggers ravaged the prostrated South, the Democratic Party,the party of our fathers, has been at the helm of Virginia's ship of state, and has guided that ship safely through many treacherous seas and political storms; and despite many difficulties, has sailed that ship of state on an even governmental keel and brought it and kept it safely into the port of Jeffersonan Democracy.

"Today, as in the past, the Democratic Party in Virginia and in the Nation is responsive to the will of the people. It has given Virginia and the Nation efficient government, and has met the needs of the people; and has been and is the only genuine haven of political refuge for Virginia and the Southland, and the Desfocrats of Virginia are happy to be a part of that Great Democratic Party, and stand ready, willing and able to respond to its call nationally as well as state wide and give it deserved support on the political battlefield of the present campaign and in future political wars.

"Therefore, fellow Democrats, permit me to urge you to neither be overconfident or complacent in the present campaign and to submerge any individual or personal differences that might exist for the good of our Party and consequently for the good of our country, vote and get out the vote as you have done so loyally and faithfully in the past for the straight Democratic ticket and ocme November 6th, we will be the fortunate reicpients of a Democratic Administration and a Democratic Congress which will be our only hope for regaining our States Rights and those who have made the supreme sacrifice for the preservation of state sovereignty and who be buried on yonder hill in the sacred soil of Appomattox will not have died in vain."

Chairman Teens Against Polio

. . . Miss Kathryn Russell

A winsome, athletic, sixteen year old Annandale girl, who refused to stay down for the count because of polio, has been named State Chairman of Teens against Polio.

Miss Kathryn Russell, an honor high school student and state secretary of the Student Cooperative Association, was appointed to this position by Mr. O. D. Dennis, Jr., of Richmond, state March of Dimes Chairman.

In this capacity, Miss Russell will organize Virginia teenagers in the fight against polio which will include the collection of funds by Democratic students inoculated with the Salk vaccine.

"This year we have witnessed the unfortunate occurance of paralytic polio striking 40 unvaccinated teens in Virginia," commented Miss Russell. "I believe this need not happen next year if all state teens work together for complete innoculation," she added.

Stricken by polio nine years ago, as were her father and brother, the student leader has made an excellent recovery. She is an excellent swimmer, a member of the varsity basketball team and former captain of the softball team.

The attractive young lady whose hobby is helping others, plans to enter nursing after high school.

HOMECOMING AT RANDOLPH - MACON

Ashland, Oct. 15.- Randolph-Macon College will hold its annual homecoming celebration on Saturday, October 27, it was announced this week by J. Rodney Jones, alumni director.

Although Saturday is the official homecoming day, festivities will begin the night before with a freshman class plays host to the faculty and upperclasmen at a barbecue picnic.

FOR VETERANS

Volunteers working in the Veterans Administration tuberculosis hospitals incur no hazard of contracting TB, a nationwide VA survey shows.

While the incidence of tuberculosis in the general population is approximately 1 case in every 1,000 persons, Dr. Leo V. Schnider, Chief of Tuberculosis Control, said that of 11,375 volunteer workers X-rayed at VA hospitals and clinic installations throughout the nation from July 1, 1955 through June 30, 1956, not one had developed a tuberculosis since coming on duty.

These men and women volunteers, largely from veterans' and other community organizations and from the families of veterans, serve without pay at hospitals and similar facilities.

HOMEMAKERS ITEMS

Several flowers will hold their color, and add beauty to winter arrangements, if dried in borax, or borax and meal.

Home economists at VPI say that marigolds, zinnias, pansies, roses, violets, daisies, summer asters, hollyhock, and black-eyed Susans are among the flowers that can be dried by the borax method.

Use plain borax, or one part borax to six parts meal. Cover the bottom of a box with about an inch of borax, or the borax and meal mixture. Place flowers face down and gently work the borax or mixture between the petals being careful not to bend or crush them. Have the backs of the petals barely covered, Do not cover stems. Let stand until dried. A word of caution—most blue-reds do not dry well.

Some leaves and branches can be conditioned for an indefinite period of beauty by placing them in a solution of one-half glycerine and one-half water. This treatment is adaptable to magnolia brances (the leaves will turn golden brown), and beech branches (mature green leaves stay green, yelolw leaves will stay yellow, if treated just after they turn in the autumn). Crush about two inches of the bottom of the stems with a hammer before placing in the solution. The treatment takes two to six weeks.

How would you close a long cut if no doctor were available to take care of it? This problem has stumped mothers for a long time. A recent medical publication tells how. First clean the wound thoroughly. Dry it, and tape it shut with cellophane tape. The tape may come off, but can be replaced. In a series of 104 cases treated this way, even deep cuts appeared to heal evenly and without scarring.

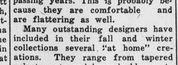
BETHANY HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The Bethany Home Demonstration Club met with Mrs. Emmett Paulette Oct. 1, with eight members present. Mrs. Audrey S. Robinson, Vepco Home Economist, of Farmville, gave an interesting demonstration on Good Home Lighting. The November meeting will be held with Mrs. Melvin Grishaw.



Clothes to be "at home in" have become more important with the passing years. This is probably because they are comfortable and are flattering as well.

Many outstanding designers have included in their fall and winter collections several "at home" creations. They range from tapered velvet pants and brocade blouses to full-skirted affairs almost as formal as a ball gown.

Favored in America are the more informal tapered pants, full-skirted dresses or lounging robes. A long satin skirt with generous box pleats, topped by an evening sweater, is an effective "at home" outfit and one that is easy to make.

The men have their version of "at home" clothes that have been in use, in the form of smoking jackets, long before women took up the idea. The smoking jacket, as such, is dated and in its place are all kinds of soft velvet and wool jackets. They can be had in plaids, prints, with satin or braid trim. Some are designed to be worn with a soft shirt and others with a scarf around the neck.

Men's lounging pants are cut for comfort and usually have tapered legs and no cuff, somewhat like a comfortable version of a tux pants. They can be had in almost any fabric but velvit and soft wool are the most popular. They are most often in dark colors because this looks best with the bright reds, yellows, purples, and pinks favored for "at home" jackets.

Most men are a little shy of something new in clothes and of bright colors. However, we have been told that once they try these new ideas, they are won over for life.

This season's children's clothes are said to have strong Dutch feeling—for whatever this is worth. We do know that more and more interest is put into clothes for the little ones. Several of the important showings in America have presented mother and daughter dresses and bathrobes. The father and son night-clothes idea has spread to include mother and daughter.

These family clothes sound like fun. The sweater industry is making the most of this new trend this fall and winter. Several companies are offering sweaters alike for the whole family.

F. F. A. BOYS WIN PRIZES AT LYNCHBURG SHOW

Ten first prizes were won in the Lynchburg Farm Show last week by members of the Appomattox High School F. F. A. Chapter. The local Future Farmers took ten firsts, six seconds, and eight thirds in twenty-eight awards received on approximately 50 entries.

In the livestock division, Frank Inge, Chapter president, took first place on a registered senior Holstein calf. Dennis Torrence took first place on a grade senior Holstein calf. Brok Pack, showing a registered Guernsey senior calf won a third place ribbon. A grade Guernsey calf shown by Henry Covington, and a grade Holstein calf shown by Gerald Blanks each took third place ribbons. Kinckle Martin placed fourth in his class with a Holstein yearling. Six ribbons were won by seven head of cattle shown by the local boys.

In the crops division, first place ribbons were won by: Floyd Coleman on yellow hybrid corn; Gerald Blanks on alfalfa hay; Dennis Torrence on mixed hay; Brod Pack on alfalfa sheaf exhibit; David Doss on dark-fired tobacco fillers; and by Kinckle Martin on cured lima beans and blackeye peas. Red ribbons were awarded to: Gerald Blanks for clover hay; Gerald Blanks for mixed hay; Gerald Blanks for clover sheaf exhibit; and James Doss for dark-fired tobacco fillers.

Third place prizes were won in the crops division by: Gerald Blanks for best gallon of oats; Gerald Blanks for lespedeza hay; Fred Moore for dark-fired tobacco fillers; and Kinckle Martin for dark-fired tobacco wrappers. Other prizes in crops went to Fred Moore, Phillip Scruggs, and Laverne Garrett.

The farm mechanics classes which were made up of things made by the F. F. A. boy in his agricultural shop program, saw three prizes taken by the Appomattox High School boys. In the Utility class, Eugene Conner took first place with a tractor mounted post hole digger. Dennis Torrence won the red ribbon with a tractor seeder which he constructed. In the class for self feeders, Nelson Mann won second on a hog self-feeder.

Richard Krants, representing the Future Farmers of Appomattox County in the tractor driving contest at the show placed third. Fourteen counties are represented in the Lynchburg Farm Show, with each county being entitled to one tractor driver in the contest.

Contrary to the reports that Jimmy Cagney is quitting pictures, he is about to tackle the Lon Chaney life story. "Man of A Thousand Faces" for Universal - International.
